

VINCENT LOMBARDI LODGE #2270

The Roar of the Lion

Marisa Rubé Przepiora, editor
April 2023 Edition

Dear Brothers and Sisters,

I love spring when the threat of snow and freezing temperatures have passed. The days get longer and nights get shorter, the air is warmer, leaves come out on the trees and flowers bloom, birds and animals have babies, and we hear all the wonderful sounds of the season. It feels wonderful to shed the heavy winter coats, boots, sweaters, and slacks. The earth comes alive and it's like we are given another chance to start fresh and begin again. It's the perfect time to be outside. Spring is filled with holidays: Easter, Passover, April Fools Day, Earth Day, Arbor Day, Mother's Day, Father's Day, Cinco De Mayo, Memorial Day, and Flag time. So many reasons for families and friends to get together. In the Rochester area festivals begin starting with the Lilacs when they bloom in mid-May.

This is what my spring looks like and what I look forward to:

Buona Pasqua

Easter is one of Italy's biggest and most important holiday. Although Vatican City draws many visitors throughout Holy Week, which begins on Palm Sunday, there are religious processions and services all over Italy. The oldest religious procession takes place in Chieti, a town in Abruzzo, where thousands of hooded brothers march through the streets followed by a marching band and choir performing the "Miserere."

Although there is no Easter Bunny in Italy, there is an abundance of chocolate. Some in the shape of large eggs that hold prizes inside. Easter Sunday mass is held at the Vatican in St. Peter's Square. One interesting celebration takes place in Florence where a dove-shaped rocket flies out of the Duomo, lands on a wooden cart which is slit on fire and sets off the fireworks.

Easter Monday, sometimes called Pasquetta, is a national holiday. Special events or concerts take place. There are Pasquetta games, too, such as the Palio dell'Uovo – Palio of the Egg – in Tredozio (including a hard-boiled-egg-eating contest and an egg-themed obstacle course of sorts) and the race in Panciale involving local contestants rolling wheels of cheese around the city walls.

'Il Giorno Della Liberazione'

National Liberation Day

April 25th

The day marks the beginning of the end of Nazi fascism. Alcide De Gasperi, the then prime minister of Italy, established this day as a national holiday in 1949.

Liberation Day (Festa della Liberazione) remembers Italians who fought against the Nazis and Mussolini's troops during World War II. The day honors those who served in the Italian Resistance. Marching bands, music concerts, food festivals, political rallies, and other public gatherings take place in many places in Italy.

Celebrate Arbor Day

Plant A Tree

East Rochester Arbor Day

Theodore Roosevelt said, "To exist as a nation, to prosper as a state, and to live as a people, we must have trees."

East Rochester will hold its Arbor Day Ceremony on April 28th, 12 Noon in the Edmund Lyon Park, 750 Main Street. It is co-sponsored by ER Parks Committee and East Rochester Rotary.

East Rochester is designated as a "Tree City USA Community", a program that began in 1976 greening up cities and towns. It is a nationwide movement that provides the framework necessary for communities to manage and expand their public trees. There are more than 3400 communities who have made this commitment.

The program has spread internationally. There are six cities in Italy considered "Tree Cities": Cesana, recognized for 2 years, 400 trees plants, 50 volunteer hours; Lignano Sabbiadoro, recognized for 2 years, 2600 trees plants, 100 volunteer hours; Milano, recognized for 3 years, 18,395 trees plants, 0 volunteer hours; Modena, recognized for 2 years, with 550 trees planted, 13,000 volunteer hours; Padova, recognized for 2 years, planted 1464 trees, 84 volunteer hours; and Turin recognized for 3 years with 20,873 trees plants, 720 volunteer hours.

Celebrate East Rochester's achievement, but if you are unable to attend the ceremony on April 28th, you can still raise awareness that planting trees is in the best interest of everyone.

The Absurdity Michelangelo's David considered pornographic!

Students and lovers of Renaissance art could not be more appalled to have one of the most recognized masterpieces in the world to be called pornographic. Studying Michelangelo's David, parents of 6th graders in a Florida school complained the material shown was pornographic and they should have been notified about the lesson beforehand.

The school has a policy that parents should be notified in advance about any controversial topics, but Italians look at the Renaissance era and its masterpieces, including nude sculptures, as not being controversial. Galleria dell' Accademia director, Cecilie Hollberg, considers the entire incident as absolutely astonishing. She is quoted as saying, "We are talking about the icon of the Renaissance Michelangelo's David, which has been recognized across the world for generations." She further stated the statue has been hailed for its beauty and purity. One must have a twisted mind to combine nudity with what was suggested, because obviously there is a big difference between nudity and pornography. There is a huge ignorance about history and the history of art which, more than anything, is quite sad."

Did you know?

The art of building string instruments reached near perfection in a workshop in Cremona, Italy in the early 1700s.

The craftsman, Antonio Stradivari's design for the violin has served as the model for violin makers for more than 250 years. He experimented with shape and arching of the violin, using a flatter arching which contributed to a more powerful tone. He tested different dimensions and proportions. Although primarily known for his violins, he also built violas, cellos, harps, guitars, and mandolins.

Antonio Stradivari is regarded as the greatest violin maker in the world, and at the peak of his career from 1700 to 1720 was known as the Golden Period. It is estimated that he made over 1,100 instruments in his life. About 650 instruments still survive, including between 450-512 violins.

The patterns of the actual violin have been analyzed and researched, and the wood has been scrutinized, taking into consideration the origin of the wood. It turns out the varnish Stradivari used is an elusive secret and one of the mysteries of the famous violins. Three hundred years later, anyone studying the violin would be ecstatic to handle of one these masterpieces.

A SIP OF WINE The Story of Chianti

The region of Chianti lies between the cities of Florence and Siena. Centuries ago, Florence tried to fix the boundary line with Siena through the Chianti region. Siena asked to settle the affair by arbitration. The podesta` of Poggibonsi (a town in the Province of Siena) was called in to act as the umpire. The decision made was that a horseman would set out at the cock's crow in the morning from their respective communities, Florence and Siena, and gallop until the two met, which would be the frontier.

The roosters selected by each: Sieneese, a fine much pampered white Cock, which had become quite plump from the rich diet it was fed. The Florentines chose a black rooster, which they fed little to eat. So On the appointed day, the black rooster crowed long before dawn, and the Florentine rider set out. He met the Siena horseman at Croce Fiorentina only 19 km (11.81 miles) from the Siena border. True story or not, most of the Chianti region passed into the hands of Florence as the result of the Peace Treaty of Fonterutoli 1201. A black rooster was painted on the ceiling of the Hall of Five Hundred in Florence's Piazza Vecchio.

In 1932 the Chianti Region was officially designated a DOC region with seven sub zones created for Classico. The entire region became a DOCG in 1984. Wines that belong to the Classico Consortium bear a black rooster emblem on the neck of the bottle

Chianti is a sangiovese based wine from grapes in Chianti.

We all remember this bottle. After the wine was gone, a candle was placed in the neck, lit, and the wax would melt down the side. And yes, this can still be purchased. A DOCG, it is considered traditional in style. The straw basket, is called fiasco.

Lamborghini 60 Years:

Lamborghini started out building tractors after World War II and was also involved with making pneumatic valves and air conditioning units. As the story goes, he bought a Ferrari and was extremely disappointed.

His main criticism was with the transmission. He improved the car and sent the details back to Ferrari, but Ferrari was insulted and dismissed the improvements. True or not, the Lamborghini factory was founded in 1963. Ever since, no matter what the model, Lamborghini has stood for innovation engineering excellence, unique design, and outstanding performance. 60 years, not matter what the industry, is an impressive milestone.

Water Shortages after Winter Drought:

Winter drought in the northern regions of Italy may be a severe cut back in water usage after the winter season is over. The worst affected regions include Piemonte and Lombardy, which also took a hit the spring of 2022. Between six and fifteen percent of Italy's population live in areas with severe or extreme drought conditions. The lack of rainfall and snow this winter has made the situation worse but how much worse will depend on weather conditions over the next three months, which is usually the rainiest time of the year the regions in the north.

An Important Topic: Digital Assets and End of Life Planning

According to the IRS, a digital asset is anything created and stored digitally. What is a digital asset? It is “any digital representation of value which is recorded on a cryptographically secured distributed ledger or any similar technology.” As technology becomes more popular, easier to manage, valuable, and is integrated into our lives, the more digital footprint we have. This comes in the form of data, videos, written content, logos, websites, spreadsheets, and anything we store on our computers or “in the cloud”. It is not a digital asset if it has no value.

There is limited government control over digital assets with hardly any oversight legislatively or through legal precedent. Control issues are maintained by individual companies where transferability is not allowed even after one’s death. What happens to digital assets when someone dies?

Prior to the 1980’s most of us believed that planning for our death mainly meant writing our last will and testament, and our assets would be distributed to our heirs in accordance with one’s wishes. It was not complicated to transfer property or other assets as bequeath or permit management of our financial affairs if we became incapacitated. It is still important to prepare a will or living trust and name a durable power of attorney as part of the planning process, but we also have a digital existence that we need to plan for once we die. A will or living trust gives the executor instructions concerning payment of debts and taxes and allows for the distribution of property.

If you die having prepared a will with allocation of physical property, the probate court approves the executor selected and assets are distributed according to the deceased wishes, but if there is no will, the court will appoint an administrator to any debts and final expenses with what is left distributed to the heirs, but perhaps not in the way the deceased would have wanted.

In the past, the executor would inventory all the assets including bank and investment statements. Creditors would be identified in the same manner. Much of it came in the regular postal mail. But in our modern digital world, a lot of what we receive comes to the inbox on our computer, cell phone, or tablet. Sometimes property takes the form of cyber-currency and non-fungible tokens coded in blockchain. In understandable language, a blockchain is a ledger that cannot be changed which enables transactions to be recorded and assets to be tracked in a business network. We think of assets in two ways: tangible, such as a house, car, land, money or intangible such as intellectual property, patents, copyrights, trademarks, branding. Accessing a deceased person’s digital assets: email and social media accounts, microblogging sites, website accounts, or other electronically stored assets, could be prohibited by computer privacy laws. The Electronics Communications Privacy Act (ECPA), 1986, protects certain wire, oral, and electronic communications from any unauthorized persons, use, access, or disclosure.

If your will or your durable power of attorney does not indicate directly control of digital assets, your family or the executor may be limited by what the online service provider is willing to make available, which is determined by the terms of use or agreement that was accepted when the account was opened. Most of the digital assets you believe you own, you don’t and they will not be transferrable to someone else even if bequeathed in a will. While these may have sentimental value to you and your family, you may not own them. Emails and social media accounts are not owned by the person who originated them. There is a license that allows them to be used and the ability to transfer them to someone else is limited by the terms agreed upon when the account was opened. Examples of digital assets that cannot be transferred through a will: email and social media accounts, non-transferrable domains that are licensed, subscription accounts such as Netflix or Spotify; and apps on your phone or tablet and the data contained on them.

It does matter if what you have stored or saved is on the hard drive of your computer or stored in the cloud, special arrangements for digital assets should be made in advance. The executor or trustee should be given user names and passwords for all accounts, but even with this information, there could be issues with the vendor service agreement that denies access, manages, distributes, copies, deletes, or even closes accounts.

The Revised Uniform Fiduciary Access to Digital Assets Act (RUFADAA) addresses whether and how a family member, executor, or attorney is allowed to access to digital assets. The law is different from state laws governing estate administration, powers of attorney, and trusts. It doesn't assume that family members can access digital assets just because of their relationship with the owner. The statute wants express authorization before anyone is allowed access to content. Investing in Password Manager could be very helpful. Most of what we do and access on the internet we are required to have a username and password. It is strongly suggested the password be different for each account and changed every few months. Just getting onto the computer, banking, ordering from different online stores, schools, work, etc. we can have multiple passwords and keeping track of them is not always easy. Password manager is a software application designed to store and manage online credentials. It allows for generating and securely storing long, unique passwords for all of your online accounts.

When you make out your will or review it, ask about adding language to give your executive and/or trustee the right to access non-financial digital assets and accounts. Your Power of Attorney (POA) can also be given access to act on your behalf. Review the procedures on all your accounts to understand what their policies are and can discuss with the executor who will oversee your digital assets when you die.

Paul Gentile is very passionate about what he does, and making us aware of what happens to our digital assets and what we can do to safeguard them is of critical importance. His website is:

Classes will show you how to “prepare, protect, and pass on one of our most important possessions—our digital legacy.”

Etymology—the study of words

Parlare al muro is similar to the English phrase “it’s like talking to a brick wall,” but the Italian idiom refers to scenarios where the words don’t get through to a person because of their stubbornness or refusal to listen. It can also be used in situations where the understanding of a concept may be lacking or knowledge due to limited intelligence.

Sottointeso is made up of the Italian words sotto (under) and inteso (intended), and you could say this word is used to talk about the meaning beneath a message. The dictionary defines this as concepts or thoughts “not explicitly expressed, but implicit and more or less easy to deduce.” It may seem friendly on the surface, but the underlying intent may be an insult. (The Local, March 7, 2023)

Vergogna runs the full gamut from awkwardness to embarrassment to all-out disgrace. In its mildest form: Provo vergogna davanti a lei. I feel shy around her. Being ashamed: Non hai vergogna delle bugie che hai detto? Aren't you ashamed of the lies you told? Someone's ashamed of you: Sei la vergogna della famiglia. You're a disgrace to the family.

Sfogarsi is an act of expressing emotions or releasing pent-up feelings which can be done in a variety of ways, such as talking to someone, writing in a journal, or engaging in physical activity. “Mi piace sfogarsi facendo una passeggiata nella natura.” “I like to let off steam by taking a walk-in nature.”

Crepuscolo is for the romantics, the artists, and the photographers. It's the most magical moment of the day: those last few moments of fading light before the sky becomes fully dark. Like all the best Italian words, it can be used in other contexts to add a little drama.
